

SHAWMUT RUBBERS

They Wear Longer

The name "Shawmut" on any rubber means the best rubber that can be produced; it means a rubber with more special features, more style and better fit than any other rubber. It means too, a saving of money for "Shawmut" rubbers will certainly wear longer and give you better and more lasting satisfaction than any rubber you ever wore.

Bear this in mind however—if you are induced by our advertising to buy "Shawmuts" and then after finding them reliable and satisfactory you insist on wearing them in preference to other brands it will be on account of their merit. In "Shawmut" you will get only the highest grade and most distinctive styles.

The best dramatic manager will admit that no play is a sure success until it has stood the test of a public audience. No play reader is sure of picking out a success, even if the particular play pleases him or his manager better than any other reader in the decade. "Out in Idaho," which will appear at the opera house to-night, has stood the test of thousands of Western audiences and the Westerners above all other people are the first to condemn a Western play. "Out in Idaho" is a play of the West, peopled with Western characters. Some people think that a Western play must necessarily be full of shooting and knife sticking. The people there are just natural. The drama must be natural to be good, a man must be natural if he is to be respected.

The I. O. G. T. masquerade in the R. of C. hall last evening was well attended, about eighty tickets being sold. There was a large number in masks. The first prizes were given to Miss Lula Thompson, representing the Queen of Hearts, and Earl Hodgkin, representing a soldier of Uncle Sam. The second prizes were given to Mrs. Earl Hayden, who had the make-up of an old woman and to Harley Chapin, who was "Jumping Joe." Among the most prominent costumes were: "The Times," represented by a girl wearing an entire dress and hat of the Barre Daily Times; and "The Globe," represented by a girl with Boston Globe headlines sewed on her dress and a hat made of a Globe. There was also a very pretty sailor costume of light blue and white. "Night" was tastefully represented, as was "Little Red Riding Hood" and many others.
